

SOAR is a documentary following the lives of sisters and dancers Kiera and Uriah as they transition out of adolescence and into adulthood. It weaves together footage of their performances with the equally intricate dance of sisterhood as they redefine their relationships with each other, finding their own unique paths in life.

The documentary is a sensitive portrait of sisterly love and celebrates the extraordinary ways that Kiera, a quadruple amputee, has adapted; she holds a Medical Assistant degree, and is a professional dancer and choreographer in Portland, OR. This film is a must see for viewers of all ages.
